

Sinclair
Broadcasting uses
the public airwaves
free of charge, and
is obligated by law
to serve the public interest. It does
not serve the
interest of the
community nor does
it serve the
interest of
democracy when media
giants are allowed
to use their power
to sway the opinions
of the public during
major political
campaigns.

The men and women at Sinclair who have
made the decision to
pre-empt regularly
scheduled
programming to show
"Stolen Honor," a
film specifically
directed against
John Kerry, are
breaking the law.
They have every
right to their
opinions and they
can express those
opinions on November 2nd at the polls,
just like me and
you. This is not a partisan issue. If a
large media
corporation was planning to
interrupt their
broadcasts in order
to show Michael
Moore's Fahrenheit
9/11 weeks before
election day than
many Americans would
surely oppose such
action.

Don't let
corporations step
into our political
process any further.
The FCC has a duty
to serve the
American public and
its interests. I am
a member of such a
public and I am
interested in
watching

presidential debates
and factual,
non-partisan news
programs. I am not interested in being
force fed the
political views of
the top executives
at Sinclair
Broadcasting.
